To stare at death
and to come face
to face with ones
own mortality, liberates
us from the bondage
of suffering; knowing
full well that one day this too shall perish, gives an understanding of how precious our time
is here and now.

A part of me still
wants to die.

A part of me believes
I am of no use to the world.

A part of me believes it would be better for my family if I just disappeared.

It's not as easy as saying "fuck that part of me" or cutting it out of my brain.

For now, I'll keep living until I figure out what to do about that part.
